

Legal | A South Korea court has ruled an exhibition devoted to One Piece can be held as planned after it was abruptly canceled earlier this month following allegations that Eiichiro Oda's popular pirate manga contains images that resemble the Rising Sun flag, considered a symbol of Japanese imperialism in South Korea. The company staging [...]

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2014/07/comics-a-m-south-korea-court-rules-one-piece-show-can-go-on/>