

If a cigar can be just a cigar, and not some obvious phallic symbol to be endlessly sucked and played with, then can a superhero ever be just a superhero, or is it always representative of a deeper, more complex need within us? One of the stand-out moments from the Warren Ellis documentary (Captured Ghosts) [...]

Read more: <http://goodcomics.comicbookresources.com/2011/11/02/committed-what-british-comic-writers-learned-from-thatcher/>