

When it was first revealed that the talented thespian, Irrfan Khan (Slumdog Millionaire) was cast in The Amazing Spider-Man and that he would play a scientist named Van Atter fans immediately made the connection to Proto-Goblin [known in Marvel Comics as Van Adder]. However, recently Sony revealed that Khan's character would be renamed Dr. Rath and the actor himself has stated that his only condition for joining the cast was that he would not play a masked villain or a creature. However, in a subsequent interview, Khan did reveal that he would indeed be playing a pivotal villain in the film [I'm assuming just not a masked one]. Now, in a more recent interview, Khan briefly touched on The Amazing Spider-Man and has a quote that quizzically seems to contradict one of his prior statements. On his work in The Amazing Spider-Man: Khan: "It was wonderful working with Marc

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=55076&t=Irrfan_Khan_Praises_THE_AMAZING_SPIDER-MAN_Director_Marc_Webb_Discusses_His_Costume