

The folks over at Moviehole say that casting agents were handed out a cast sheet looking to cast Artemisia in the upcoming 300 sequel. What is significant about this is that the cast sheet had the name of the movie as 300: The Battle of Artemisium, instead of the previously reported 300: The Battle of Artemisia. There is was also a brief synopsis attached to the the sheet that gives us a possibility of what the story might hold for the upcoming sequel to Zack Snyder's 300. Possible Synopsis from Moviehole: Xerxes (Rodrigo Santoro) is somewhat pushed into the bloody battle with the Greeks by the gold-covered maven goddess Artemisia. Artemisia, witnessing just how much his father King Darius's death has affected him, persuades Xerxes – with her “vindictive charm” – to go into battle against those responsible. Artemisia tells Xerxes that he has no choice but to avenge his father's death and has

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=49495&t=i300i_Sequel_Gets_Another_Name_Change_And_Possible_Synopsis