

5. Super Robot Monkey Team Hyperforce Go! Knock-Off Of: The Powerpuff Girls/Teen Titans Sporting one of the longest names in the cartoon business, SRMTHFG was an absolute blast to watch as a kid. Mixing some pretty hefty violence with some lovable and crazy characters, the series was created by Teen Titans director Ciro Nieli and infused a lot of wit, action, and humor into its 52 episodes. Why It'd Be Successful Today: Because kids love manic energy and robots. Turning on Cartoon Network, you'll find dozens of cartoons that delve into weird, absurdist humor; and while SRMTHFG never goes that far, it's funny enough and action-packed enough to sort of serve as a bridge between shows like that...ninja show thingy and Adventure Time.

4. Sherlock Holmes in the 22 Century Knock-Off Of: Where in the World is Carmen San Diego?/Scooby-Doo There are plenty of reasons why this shouldn't work. You're not only modernizing Holmes, you

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/SoHelpYouGod/news/?a=66208>