

```
var l_ttlPages = 6; var l_url = location.pathname.replace(location.hash, ""); var qs = (function(a) { if (a == "") return {}; var b = {}; for (var i = 0; i 2 && l_page
```

Yesterday, we learned that 20th Century Fox is planning on hitting the reset button on the X-Men franchise following the disappointing performance of X-Men: Apocalypse back in May. Personally, I really liked the movie, but the vast majority of fans and critics did not, and that was reflected in how poorly it performed at the box office. So, what's next for this iconic group of mutant superheroes? As of right now, we don't really know. The studio is hoping to bring back the same cast, but with Bryan Singer hard at work on 20,000 Leagues Under the

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/x-men/x-men\_apocalypse/6-foolproof-ways-to-reboot-the-x-men-franchise-after-the-a146673