

After seventeen historic years, in just less than two months, we bid farewell to Hugh Jackman's legendary portrayal of Wolverine in 20th Century Fox's Logan and unless Ryan Reynolds manages to convince the Academy Award-nominated actor to stay on-board as the fan-favorite hero for a couple more years (just for the sake of a Wolverine/Deadpool team-up movie), it could be the last we see of Wolverine for quite some time. It's been a few months since the first emotional teaser trailer for the James Mangold-directed film landed online and we're about due for a second full-length one any day now. As for when that day could be is yet-to-be seen, but with the NFL Playoffs already underway and the Super Bowl just around the corner, it's probably not a stretch to assume it'll be with us in the next few weeks. In the meantime, check out Mangold's latest portrait of Jackman below: Years after the epilogue of X-Men: Days of Future Past, some of the last

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/x-men/a-battle-ravaged-wolverine-looks-over-his-shoulder-in-a-badass-new-photo-a148028>