

During the weekend, I was lucky enough to see brand new footage from Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter, Total Recall and The Amazing Spider-Man. Being able to attend the first ever Cup O' Joe panel was a real treat, as was the one for the Avengers Vs. X-Men event. Not only were they interesting and generally extremely enjoyable, but a damn good laugh. For example, Joe Quesada's tale of a fan submission that was drawn in crayon and featured the Silver Surfer vs. Jesus Christ and had appearances from Planet of the Apes characters. Not to mention Mark Millar's recollection of a comic he wrote about Aunt May's first sexual experience and a free one which saw Peter Parker accosted by a paedophile. The Nick Frost panel was hilarious. Looking back over his career and future plans, he kept the audience entertained with some hilarious stories and wisecracks. During the 45 minute

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=60201>