

Source: GQ Whatever you do, don't ask Cillian Murphy about The Dark Knight Rises reports GQ. "I don't have anything to say," dodged the two-time Batman and Inception star, a slight smirk visible between sips of sparkling water. Now maybe I'm reading too much into this but generally when actors are not involved in a project, there more than happy to squash rumors. Plus, the smirk almost says, "I know something but I'm not telling." Perhaps The Scarecrow will have a similar appearance in The Dark Knight Rises to his cameo in the previous Batman film. The actor did go on to discuss Christopher Nolan and internet spoilers. Working with Christopher Nolan on the Dark Knight films, do internet leaks from the set bother you? No, it's a shame that people need to do that but it's never harmed any of Chris's other movies in the past - they've all gone

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=49251&t=Actor_emCillian_Murphyem_On_Christopher_Nolans_emThe_Dark_Knight_Risesem