

Source: Empire Participating in a live chat with fans courtesy of Empire Magazine, the talented Jason Flemyng discussed X-Men: First Class, The League of Extraordinary Gentleman, and the difference between Guy Ritchie and Matthew Vaughn. @JonasRJakobsen: "Loved you in First Class! You had the most interesting fight scenes I must say. Any plans for a sequel that you know of?" FLEMYNG: I'd love to do a sequel. We shot enough fight sequences to do an Azazel fight movie. But I don't think that's going to happen. The film had to take $350 million worldwide to merit a sequel. It took $356 million, so watch this space... @Nadinehamsbrook: "What was it like being a 'superhero/mutant' in X-Men? Did you feel pressure becoming a part of a huge franchise?" FLEMYNG: I didn't really understand what I was getting into. I'd done a lot of comic book adaptations like LXG and From Hell and Stardust etc. etc. etc. But

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=49211&t=Actor_emJason_Flemyngem_On_An_emX-Men_First_Classem_Sequel_And_The_Bad_Blood_Between_emSean_Conneryem_And_Director_emStephen_Norringtonem