

Working on the Wonder Woman pilot was a dream for Adrienne Palicki. The show which has famously been chronicled from its inception to its ultimate demise was actually scheduled to be picked up. Palicki was set up to do press for the show, even booking an interview on Jimmy Kimmel Live to promote it. But during a last second shift by the studio, they decided not to go with the show. Palicki talked with Crave Online about working on the pilot. "I'm incredibly proud of that project. I was so grateful to get to play Wonder Woman. That was a childhood dream of mine and I'm proud of the outcome. I do wish it would have gone to series but everything happens for a reason. Looking at it as a positive, I got to work with some amazing actors, [an] amazing writer and I got to wear the outfit," said Palicki.
