

What follows are some excerpts from the interview: "The reason these heroic characters are always popular is because we are all somewhat limited in our real world. Even when I was Governor I wished that I could do the things that I wanted to do but I couldn't because of the system, the way it works. Or because of the way the law works," says Schwarzenegger. "The people have certain rights and those rights have to be protected – and they should be protected – but for some criminals you don't feel like they ought to be. In real life you have to first get a search warrant and by that time he's gone. It drives you kind of crazy!" "In a heroic TV show, you can make it happen. We can all live out our fantasies. So the idea is that this Governor, after he retires, says, 'With all that I have learned

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/SuperHeroTooniverse/news/?a=34682&t=Ahnuld_Talks_The_Governator