

With the confirmation that film composer Alan Silvestri will score Marvel's The Avengers, over at Marvel.com he also shares some of his thoughts regarding the whole process. You can check it out below: "This is actually a very unique experience [for me]. I've worked on films where there have been a number of stars and certainly worked on films where there have been characters of equal weight in terms of their level of importance and profile in the film, but this one is somewhat extreme in that regard because each of these characters has their own world and it's a very different situation. It's very challenging to look for a way to give everyone the weight and consideration they need, but at the same time the film is really about the coming together of these characters, which implies that there is this entity called the Avengers which really has to be representative of

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Wolvie09/news/?a=49917&t=Alan Silvestri Talks About Scoring Marvels iThe Avengers