

Earlier this month, we learned that director JJ Abrams was pursuing Benicio del Toro to play the villain in his upcoming sequel to Star Trek (set to begin filming in January). Now, Variety is reporting that Alice Eve - who'll next be seen in The Raven and the third Men In Black - is being pursued by Abrams to play a new (yet currently unknown) character in the sequel. The actress doesn't have a deal set yet, but a deal is expected to be made soon (Del Toro's deal is also pending). J.J. Abrams' second installment of the "Star Trek" franchise is gearing up, as the director has chosen Alice Eve to join the ensemble cast, playing a character that's believed to be new to the canon. Paramount had no comment on the involvement of Eve, who doesn't yet have a deal in place -- but is expected to soon. Benicio del

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=50510&t=Alice_Eve_Chosen_For_A_Role_In_STAR_TREK_Sequel