

With the release of Marvel and Joe Johnston's Captain America: The First Avenger movie five days away, Paramount Pictures recently submitted a finalized cast list. And on that list, the last actor, or rather actress named is Amanda Righetti, whose known for her roles in The Mentalist and 2009's Friday the 13th. The 28 year old actress is set to star as a SHIELD Agent, presumably in the present-day opening and/or closing sequences of Captain America. And while shes considered a somewhat recognizable actress, a role as minor as a "SHIELD Agent" will reportedly expand in Marvels next highly-anticipated film; the Joss Whedon-directed superhero ensemble The Avengers. While anonymous sources confirm the expansion of the role, in-depth details from Captain America: The First Avenger's closing sequence were revealed today and slightly detailed exactly how minor Righetti's role is. And these same sources also suggest that sequence will be included in The Avengers
