

The Walking Dead has become wildly popular not only from comic and horror fans but with general audiences as well. To try and capitalize on the popularity AMC is rolling out their first ever after show program. The show will be called Talking Dead and will be hosted by comedian and comic book enthusiast Chris Hardwick. The show will premiere after the encore of first episode of the highly anticipated return of The Walking Dead on October 16. Joel Stillerman, AMC's SVP of original programming explained that giving the fans an opportunity to speak their mind is what lead to the decision of producing the show saying, "Fans of 'he Walking Dead are incredibly engaged with every aspect of the show. They tweet, blog, and post comments in very large numbers, and we wanted to give them an opportunity to interact with the show in a way that they don't currently

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=46838&t=AMC To Debut iTalking Deadi After Show Program