

If you wonder what it's like to have a blockbuster movie, or have it be any sized movie film in your home town, this compilation should give you a solid perspective of it all. What follows below, reminds me of the time Brad Pitt's, Sleepers was being filmed in my town. It was a unique moment that everyone should have in their life, but sadly they all cannot, but this is a way to live vicariously through the lucky few that do. The Nottingham Confidential is a local blog, and they have a fascinating view of the cast and crew.(Link) Now we're into our second week of Batman at Wollaton and rumours and japes abound. Shocking pink 'Ha-Ha' clues have been fastened to lampposts in Wollaton and the rumours of gurkhas patrolling the grounds at night as security haven't deterred several local good-natured jump-over-the-wall attempts which have all proved short-lived and have
