

Andrew Garfield will be appearing on Jimmy Kimmel Live tonight to promote Hacksaw Ridge, but will he also be taking part in a Spider-Man themed skit? He's fully suited up in the promo below regardless, and this may very well be our last look at the British actor as the wall-crawler. After all, Sony Pictures unceremoniously ditched the actor after teaming up with Marvel Studios to reboot Spider-Man. That's something he talked candidly about in a recent interview, but Garfield is no stranger to dressing up as the hero in public. He's appeared as Spider-Man at Comic-Con a couple of times in the past, and obviously donned a more expensive costume in The Amazing Spider-Man movies. Be sure to check back here in case the actor does or says anything else on the show related to this iconic role. Our favorite Hollywood Blvd. Spider-Man, Andrew Garfield TONIGHT! pic.twitter.com/dro940viCN — Jimmy Kimmel Live (@JimmyKimmelLive) October 27, 2016

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/spider-man/andrew-garfield-suits-up-as-spider-man-one-more-time-ahead-of-jimmy-a146322>