

Talking to Comicus, Ilram Choi has commented on his work as Andrew Garfield's stunt double in The Amazing Spider-Man. The fact they chose Choi, whose speciality is in martial arts, may further tease exactly the kind of movements we'll see from the iconic Marvel character in Marc Webb's upcoming adaptation. Below are some excerpts from the interview, but you can read the full version by clicking on the link below. For how long have you worked on The Amazing Spider-Man? About a year and a half. Did you have to wear the Spider-Man costume during some of your shooting? Was it somehow limiting your movements or not? Yes, it was pretty flexible and didn't limit the movements except for the vision. It was hard to see at times. Did you worked directly with the director, Marc Webb, and with the main actor, Andrew Garfield? Can you tell us something about it? Yes, worked with
