

Even though it is common to start writing a sequel when working on a big film like John Carter, we now have some solid info on that. According to Coming Soon, Andrew Stanton and the co-writer of John Carter Michael Chabon, have started working on adapting Edgar Rice Burroughs' The Gods of Mars, which is a second novel in the BARSOOM series, and of course it would be a sequel to the first film. "Speaking with producer Jim Morris, we learned that Stanton and his co-writer Michael Chabon have already been talking and doing some planning and writing for a sequel, which would tentatively be called John Carter: The Gods of Mars, based on Burroughs' second novel." Also, yesterday, there was a big press junket for John Carter in Arizona, and this is what they added regarding the film: "We're currently under an embargo preventing us from sharing our thoughts but trust us when

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Wolvie09/news/?a=54827&t=Andrew Stanton And Michael Chabon Are Working On JOHN CARTER THE GODS OF MARS