

Last month, it was revealed that Chinese actor Andy Lau was keen on landing a role in the much-anticipated Shane Black-directed Iron Man 3 movie. However, Want Chinese Times via Want Daily now claim the Internal Affairs actor has turned down the pivotal scientist role, which is said to be an ally of playboy Tony Stark. Dotting on the reason(s) for Lau's departure, and who's being considered for his replacement, check out the reports. Chinese media now report that Lau has pulled out of possible involvement due to the birth of his first child with wife Carol Chu on May 9. The Shanghai-based Oriental Morning Post reported that the producers of the film had contacted Lau but were turned down. The frontrunners for the role are now said to be Chinese actors Chen Daoming and Wu Xiubo. One of the film's producers and CEO of DMG Entertainment Group Dan

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=62180>