Serkis also shared his thoughts on returning to play 'Gollum' in the upcoming film The Hobbit: An Unexpected Journey, directed by Peter Jackson. "Gollum's never really gone too far away from me because he's indelibly kind of printed into my DNA now, I think. I'll tell you what was weird is going back and playing a character that has been so sort of absorbed into public consciousness that you almost don't feel like you own it anymore. And to sort of gather it back — I mean, I did feel, I think, probably in the first couple of days going back into it that I was sort of doing a weird impersonation of him rather than being him because there
