

A couple of years ago, it was revealed that an animated Terminator film was being pursued, under the name Terminator 3000. However, the project seemed to have been scrapped not long after the announcement. But now, The Arnold Fans managed to chat with Hannover House President Eric Parkinson to find out what's currently going on with the production, and he confirmed that the project isn't dead yet. Parkinson said that the project was in the hands of Annapurna Productions (who co-share the Terminator rights with Hannover). He also said that, if the film gets made, then it would be in the same CGI style as James Cameron's Avatar, while also commenting on the script/storyline. Parkinson also says that he's very interested in having Arnold Schwarzenegger reprise his role as the T-800. In addition, a concept/pitch logo for the film has been revealed: On The Current Status Of Terminator

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=53175&t=Animated\_TERMINATOR\_Film\_Still\_Being\_Considered\_Arnold\_Schwarzenegger\_To\_Star