

Last Friday CBM Editor Mark "RorMachine" Cassidy reported that Ant-Man director Edgar Wright had indeed turned in a script for the film last Monday. Now Wright sits down with MTV News and inevitably, the topic of Ant-Man finds it's way into the conversation. Wright had a couple of interesting bits of information he was willing to share. We actually did hand in a draft on Monday. We didn't do a second draft of Ant-Man till Joe (Cornish) had finished the Attack the Block. So, since like February we've done two drafts of the script. We just handed in the third draft on Monday. So some concept stuff and we're really excited about it. In the time that we've, between the two of us been involved in Ant-Man we've made three movies but the fact that we keep returning to that project is because we're excited about it and think it will

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GulfCoastAvengers/news/?a=42876&t=iAnt-Mani_Could_Be_A_Stand_Alone_Genre_Film_According_to_Director_Edgar_Wright