

During a brief interview with HitFix, promoting Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter, actor Anthony Mackie was informed about The Black Panther possibly being Marvel Studios' 2014 mystery film. And precisely questioned whether he'd be interested in portraying the King of Wakanda, T'Challa, Mackie essentially says he'd loved to. "I was hoping I would be the Incredible Hulk, but that didn't work out," Mackie replied, laughing. "I would love to be a part of ['Black Panther']. I love Black Panther and I love the story behind it. It would be cool to be a part of it." Anthony Mackie, 32, is personally one of my top 5 casting choices contenders for T'Challa. Although the majority of his filmography doesn't exactly deem him fit for the role, he's dealt with action in The Hurt Locker. Anyhow, he's currently filming Pain and Gain alongside Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson and Mark Wahlberg. What do

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=62140>