

Filming for The CW's TV shows are mainly incognito, and we almost never get a look into production. However, the clever YVRShoots have done it again with new photos of Vancouver's Downtown Heritage bank, which was turned into the "Starling Trust Bank" for the day. The shoot consisted of police officers using a megaphone to call out the suspects with their hands above their head. Afterwards, all the closed roads were opened back up as the shoot then took place inside to finish the actual robbery scene. This scene looks similar to that of the opening sequence of The Dark Knight, however these criminals' masks are designed after playing cards. Could these people be part of DC Comics' Royal Flush Gang? According to GreenArrowTV's Arrow Spoilers page, there is a character called the King of Diamonds who is most likely connected to this robbery. Take a look at the photos below,

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/TheAlexLynch/news/?a=67083>