

In a short interview with the Vancouver Sun, Arrow star Stephen Amell talked all about his new show on The CW including his thoughts on plenty of fanboys talking about the series ripping off Christopher Nolan's take on the Batman mythos, including the realistic tone itself. "The idea was to make it real...As real as you can make it. Now, I understand it's TV and fantastical things are going to happen but as real as possible and that naturally takes you into the Chris Nolan universe. If you want to be snarky about it you can say, 'Well, they're copying Batman.' Batman works!" He also goes into detail on how Green Arrow: Year One is affecting the series, especially the mystery shrouding the island and the fact that he wasn't actually alone, as we know he is accompanied by at least Eddie Fyers, Deathstroke and Yao Fei. "We're basing large parts

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/TheAlexLynch/news/?a=68994>