

Axe Cop has been given the green-light by Fox and will be slated for their new late-night Saturday lineup. Fox has ordered six fifteen-minute episodes of the show and plans to debut it early next year as part of its previously announced late-night Saturday animation block. The network expects to air about an hour of first-run animation programming, including a number of recurring series and a slew of animated shorts. - Vulture In the past Fox created their own sketch comedy show MadTV, and when that show headed south they followed up with ill advised, The Wanda Sykes Show, but they are now pinning their late-night hopes to a comic book created by a five-year-old. Yes, you heard that right. Axe Cop is a joint creation of two brothers with age gap of two decades. One is a professional artist, 30-year-old Ethan Nicolle, and the other is the writer, little brother Malachai,

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/nailbiter111/news/?a=58577>