

Batman-News just posted some details concerning Selina Kyles/Catwoman's character in Christopher Nolan's final Batman installment. Batman-News claims that this new information comes from a reliable source, but decide for yourselves. "Catwoman is apparently one of the most well written characters we've seen in these movies so far and she could potentially steal the show the way Heath Ledger did last time. She does some cool stuff in the movie like jumping out of windows and stealing the Batpod. Her back story is that she has a history of abuse and works as a stripper and is also a pickpocket." This is more or less in line with the SCOOP first reported on CBM back in July that Catwoman's back story would closely follow the interpretation illustrated in Frank Miller's Batman: Year One. [Catwoman's Backstory Scoop] Batman News.com is also reporting that Catwoman will indeed don a cowl at some point during the movie.

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/CoastToCoastStation/news/?a=43806&t=Backstory_For_Anne_Hathaways_Catwoman_in_emTDKRem_Revealed