

"We knew starting the movie that we didn't have a finished second or third act," the director revealed in a recent interview with Empire Magazine. The production was shut down for several months roughly halfway through shooting in order for them to figure out how to finish off the story. While many saw this as a sign of trouble, Sonnenberg is slightly more optimistic about the risky plan. "Was it responsible? The answer is, if this movie does as well as I think it will, it was genius. If it's a total failure, then it was a really stupid idea." Rick Baker, the special effects make-up artist who has worked on the aliens for each of the Men in Black movies had this to say: "It was a crazy production. We had a writer actually on the soundstage writing the words moments before the guys had to say them. I don't think

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=55151&t=Barry_Sonnenfeld_Talks_Hectic_MEN_IN_BLACK_3_Schedule_Sequel_Plans_Teased_By_Rick_Baker