

The latest issue of Empire Magazine features a new image from Justice League, and while an official version will likely be released either today or slightly later this week, we do have a scanned version (which unfortunately split it in half) for the time being. As you can see, it's a shot taken directly out of that Comic-Con trailer as the Dark Knight leads this much smaller version of the team into action. Where are Superman and Aquaman? That's a question the movie will likely answer, but seeing these four icons together is very cool. It would probably be a little more special if we'd spent more time with the characters and Batman and Wonder Woman hadn't already met (a la The Avengers), but Justice League is definitely shaping up to be one of 2017's best superhero movies, don't you guys think?

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/justice\_league/batman-leads-the-team-in-this-brand-new-image-from-zack-snyders-a148398