

According to THR, the duo behind those godawful parody movies that still somehow make quite a bit of money have set their sights on the galaxy far, far away. Jason Friedberg and Aaron Seltzer will write and direct a Star Wars spoof called (wait for it) Star Worlds Episode XXXIV=MC2: The Force Awakens The Last Jedi Who Went Rogue. Yes, really. "Jason and Aaron are a powerhouse duo who have proven time and time again that they are fully tapped into the what audiences love," said Covert Media's CEO Paul Hanson, who will produce the project with Broken Road Productions' Todd Garner. "Their fearless take on pop culture has us beyond thrilled to tackle the world's most popular franchise with the two of them leading us into a galaxy far, far away." Did you read through that with a straight face? Star Worlds doesn't have a release date, but apparently it's set to shoot this Fall.

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/sci-fi/star_wars/be-afraid-theres-a-star-wars-spoof-in-the-works-from-team-a148799