

"I would absolutely jump at the chance to play that kind of role. I think it would be so much fun. Technically what Matt Damon and Daniel Craig, and all the others before them, do is incredibly hard work. I've been lucky enough to do some quite interesting and diverse characters and roles, but I'd love to try something like that." Before you just dismiss his comments as something most rising British stars would say, then keep this in mind. In this very same interview Benedict also said he had no interest in playing the beloved science fiction character, Dr. Who. I've been following Benedict's interviews, as I have a lot of interest in his new movie Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy. Which boasts one of the greatest casts ever assembled. In those interviews he has stated multiple times that he would love to expand into action films, but this is the first time
