

It's been nearly thirty years since Star Wars actor Billy Dee Williams (Lando Calrissian) played Harvey Dent in the classic Batman movie released in 1989, but The LEGO Batman Movie director Chris McKay has now confirmed that he'll get to reprise the role in the upcoming animated feature. Details on how significant his role will be here haven't been revealed, but this is a very cool move by Warner Bros. After appearing as Dent in the Tim Burton helmed Batman, Williams was replaced by Tommy Lee Jones when director Joel Schumacher took over for Batman Forever in 1995. As a result, he never got the chance to deliver his take on Two-Face, so it will be fun getting to see (hear?) what he does here. Starring Will Arnett, Michael Cera, Rosario Dawson and Zach Galifianakis, The LEGO Batman Movie will be in cinemas worldwide on February 10th, 2017. Let us know your thoughts on this news below.

He does <https://t.co/sf1x4NtRzS> — Chris McKay (@buddboetticher) November 30, 2016

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/batman/billy-dee-williams-will-finally-get-the-chance-to-play-two-face-in-the-a147175>