

The Hollywood Reporter have revealed some new data about the international financial status of Captain America: The First Avenger, and as you can see, it's doing far better than many expected. The site have also included a specific list of how each of 2011's major superhero movies have done, which I've included below. But the film jumped $100 million during its second weekend of international release and has rolled out in only 41 markets, many of them smaller territories. That means Captain America has plenty of life left. Domestically, where the release had a one-week head start, it has earned $143.2 million. The 3D pic is doing especially big business in Latin America and Southeast Asia, pacing ahead of Marvel's Thor in territories including Mexico and Brazil, where it has cumed $15.7 million and $14.5 million, respectively. It also has done solid business in the U.K. and Ireland ($11.1 million), Australia ($8.5

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=44258&t=BOX\_OFFICE\_iCaptain\_America\_The\_First\_Avenger\_Exceeds\_Expectations\_Internationally