

After Harry Potter & The Deathly Hallows Part 2 earned over $169 million in its opening weekend, it seems inevitable that the film would continue its reign. Apparently not, as Marvel Studios' latest film, Captain America: The First Avenger, managed to take out the Boy Wizard quite easily, earning nearly $66 million in its opening weekend (a similar number to Marvel's previous film, THOR). Examiner has the following... This weekend, Marvel Studios put Captain America head-to-head with the final film in Warner Bros.' Harry Potter franchise, a move that some considered risky. Turns out, Marvel had nothing to worry about: Captain America looks ready to rake in roughly $66m in its first three days of release. Gitesh Pandya has the exact numbers here... Are you surprised that Captain America managed to beat Harry Potter this weekend? Sound off your thoughts in the usual place. Both Captain America: The First Avenger and Harry Potter

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=42766&t=BOX_OFFICE_ICaptain_America_The_First_Avengeri_Knocks_IHarry_Potter_72i_From_The_Top_Spot