

Reports are coming in that Rogue One: A Star Wars Story stayed on target and met its estimate with a massive $155M weekend opening, giving it the second best ever December performance after all-time high set by Star Wars: The Force Awakens last year, and the 12th highest opening of all-time. Plus, early morning estimates indicate that by the time the numbers are official, the Gareth Edwards-directed prequel will have scored a very impressive $17.7 - $18M from Monday screenings. This puts the film at around $172.7M domestically, with a global total of $323.5M. Rogue One should have another great weekend ahead, though it will face competition from the likes of Assassin's Creed and Passengers.
