

Skyfall Lodge, the fictional home of James Bond is set on fire during the filming of Skyfall in Hankley Common, Surrey. This scene is when baddie Silva's (played by Javier Bardem) and his men storm the house and start to destroy it. Daily Mail also has these stunning photographs that capture all the fiery action. The set you see in the photos had been put together in months, and destroyed in a blink of the eye. Set photos of headstones, and a statue with a plaque that read "Skyfall" has clued James Bond fans onto the fact that the set is actually James Bond's ancestral home. It explains the reason that the title of the film is Skyfall, and puts to rest rumors that it had something to do with a downed satellite. And last night, James Bond's countryside lodge was destroyed in a huge explosion as more scenes were filmed for

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/nailbiter111/news/?a=56960>