

As our very own wayonjones pointed out earlier, Val Kilmer was in attendance at Chicago's 2012 C2E2 (you can check out his article HERE). I was lucky to be the first one in line to sit right in the front row of the panel. Kilmer talked about not only parts of films such as Heat, Tombstone and even mentioned a little bit about voicing a character in Spider-Man: Edge of time. What was most amazing for me was hearing about him talk about the chances of voicing a DC Animated Movie in which he just replies with a simple yes and proceeds to talk about working on Dreamworks first animated film The Prince of Egypt. It's also very interesting to hear his thoughts on Bob Kane and Nicholson's performance as The Joker. Check out the video below of what I captured at Chicago's 2012 C2E2. If your interested in checking out the entire panel, check

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/comicbookjerk/news/?a=58181>