

In next week's episode of The Flash, Caitlin Snow will transform into Killer Frost to take on the Scarlet Speedster and Vibe. Frustratingly, we don't get to see her or Cisco suited up in the images below, but they still do a great job of teasing what's next for Caitlin as she potentially embarks on a villainous path. Will there be any coming back for her? That obviously remains to be seen for the time being. We also get a behind the scenes look at Kevin Smith taking charge of the episode - titled "Killer Frost" - and considering the fact that he helmed one of season two's best instalments, his return is a very exciting prospect. With The Flash movie in need of a new director, perhaps Warner Bros. could turn to him for assistance as Smith is definitely proving to be an integral part of the DC TV Universe so far.
