

The Flash has been teasing us with the possibility that Caitlin Snow will become Killer Frost ever since the season began, but it all happens in tonight's episode on The CW! Kevin Smith returns to the series to direct, and that alone points to this being a significant chapter before the four night crossover takes place next week. In fact, that's something the clip and featurette you see below make very clear. Whether or not Caitlin's villainous transformation will be permanent remains to be seen, but things aren't looking good for Julian or Barry (who she blames for what's happening to her after learning about him changing reality via Flashpoint). Do you think she should leave Team Flash to become a full on baddie? As always, be sure to let us know your thoughts on that and more in the usual place.
