

Captain America screen writers Christopher Markus and Stephen McFeely sat down with IFC To talk about numerous things Cap. Subjects that were touched on include seeing Steve in The Avengers trailer, where they might take the sequel, and that they have also turned in the outline for the sequel. Another interesting tid bit is the possibility of a Howling Commandos movie. On Cap In The Avengers: Markus: "It's exciting, because at least from the scene where he says something about Tony Stark underneath his armor, you can tell he's still 1940s Steve Rogers. He hasn't become gum-chewing, wise-cracking, internet guy - so I'm glad we started him off in a sufficiently character-driven way that now we can pop him into the present and it will serve him as a character. He doesn't just vanish into the woodwork." On writing the Captain America Sequel: McFeely: "We needed to read Joss' 'Avengers' before we could go on and do

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=48664&t=iCaptain_Americai_Writers_Talk_The_Avengers_Say_They_Have_Turned_In_Outline_For_Cap_Sequel