

With new episodes starting up a mere two weeks ago, Cartoon Network has suddenly pulled DC Nation from its scheduling until January of next year. Giancarlo Volpe, a producer on Green Lantern: The Animated Series, had this to say on the subject: "Apparently Cartoon Network preempted it in celebration of their 20th birthday. Their logic, not mine. I am very disappointed." Not surprisingly, the backlash has already begun, with criticism of the decision appearing on the DC Nation Facebook page (including one individual that responded to a poll asking fans to name their favorite supervillain with "Cartoon Network executives").

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/ABERRATION/news/?a=68656>