

At the end of Daredevil's second season, Matt Murdock revealed his secret identity to Karen Page. It was a pretty major cliffhanger to leave things on, but Charlie Cox has now confirmed that The Defenders won't pick up immediately after that. As expected, the death of Elektra has hit the Matt hard, though with Elodie Yung confirmed to return, that's something he'll be dealing with before long. "Well, it's been a few months since the end of season 2. I think it's been quite a challenging few months for him. He took the death of Elektra very badly—I think he feels responsible for that. One of Matt's big things is trying to protect the people he loves, which is why he keeps his identity hidden, and he's failed. He's left holding the dead body of a loved one, and so I think he's tried to turn a corner. It's almost like quitting an addiction in the hope that it will get easier.

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/tv/marvel/defenders/charlie-cox-reveals-where-we-pick-up-with-daredevil-at-the-a148168>