

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=28739&:t=iCharlies_Angelsi_Director_McG_To_Helm_NBCs_iWonder_Womani_Pilot

According to TV Line and several other sites, McG, director of the Charlie's Angels remake, may take on the pilot for David E. Kelley's Wonder Woman series for NBC & Warner Bros. TV. "Sources confirm to me exclusively that McG has emerged as the odds-on favorite to direct the pilot for NBC's much-hyped Wonder Woman remake. Sources stress that there are no talks going on as McG has not met on the project yet, but word is that he is considered a frontrunner for the job." McG's previous TV directing gigs include pilots for Chuck and Fastlane, both projects developed and produced by McG's company. Also, being that this IS just the pilot, judgement shouldn't be passed for much-anticipated series. But what do you think?