

The plot of Denis Villeneuve's Blade Runner sequel has been shrouded in mystery for a long time, but now thanks to the recent first trailer and this batch of official stills courtesy of EW, we are starting to piece things together. The pics feature Ryan Gosling as K, who has the same job Deckard (the returning Harrison Ford) had in the original: "retiring" artificial humans known as replicants. At some point a secret is unearthed, and K must track Deckard down in an attempt to save "what's left of society." We also get our first look at a character named Joi (War Dogs actress Ana de Armas), who could well turn out to be a replicant. Check out the stills along with EW's new cover below, and let us know how you think Blade Runner 2049 is shaping up.

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/sci-fi/check-out-the-first-official-stills-from-blade-runner-2049-along-with-a147643>