

Speaking with MTV News recently, Chris Evans was asked if he did much of the stunt work for the upcoming Captain America:The First Avenger. "The good thing about Cap is that most of his abilities are rooted in what a human being is capable of — he's not flying, he's not shooting fire. For the most part, the stunts involved were hand-to-hand combat, so any time I can put the gloves on and get in the ring, I'll do it." He continues on and almost spills the beans on some of his favorite action sequences... "There are a couple scenes, but I'm not going to tell ya. We've got some good fight sequences. There are some big ... you'll have to go see [the movie]. You'll have to go see it." He had the following to say after listening to a Captain America toy he is handed... "These are all things my mother

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GulfCoastAvengers/news/?a=42233&t=Chris_Evans_Briefly_Discusses_iCaptain_AmericaThe_First_Avenger_i_Combat_Stunts