

Talking to The Triangle, Chris Evans has revealed more about how he feels donning the iconic suit and becoming one of Marvel's greatest superheroes on the big screen this Summer. Below are a few of the most interesting excerpts, but you can read a lot more by clicking on the link below to hear on over to the site. On Living Up To High Expectations From The Fans: At the end of the day, you're making the movie for the fans. These movies wouldn't get made if there wasn't a built-in fanbase. They just wouldn't. So at the end of the day, your loyalty is to the people who are passionate about these comic books, so you want to make sure that they're happy, first and foremost. On Hugo Weaving's Red Skull: Hugo has a presence. You know, it's his face; it's his voice; it's his body. Everything about Hugo belongs on film. On The Extra

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=38651&t=Chris_Evans_Talks_iCaptain_Americai_Fan_Expectations_Hugo_Weaving_And_More