

While promoting The Iceman at this year's Toronto International Film Festival (TIFF) actor Chris Evans fielded the inevitable Marvel related questions pertaining to The Avengers and Captain America: The Winter Soldier. I was kind enough to type up a transcript of the interview below, you can click HERE to watch the video over at Tribute. On working on big budget movies like Captain America: The First Avengers and The Avengers versus small indie films like The Iceman- Chris Evans: I've been pretty candid in the past, I'm not a huge fan of the studio movies. From 'soup to nuts' the process of making those movies is very tedious and sometimes the final product becomes-the original vision becomes homogenized. And then the promoting process is a real chore. I much prefer these smaller films, they're more my speed. So you do these giant movies and thank god, (Captain America:TFA and

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=67101>