

MOVIE LINE talked with Chris Evans and the Kassen bros. recently to discuss his new film Puncture which premiered at the Tribeca Film Festival this week. Of course almost the entire conversation was directly related to Puncture but comparisons between the way Puncture and Captain America were filmed did arise. As a character, Mike is a departure for you. Are you going to try to do more of these types of roles going forward, perhaps to balance out being a major superhero like Captain America? "Yeah, of course! You gotta. The Captain America stuff is great, it's fun. I actually do connect to the character; I love that character. But for me, the thing I struggle with on those films is the process. The way the film is made. It's a very big movie, there's a lot of waiting around. This film, we shot... 25 days? 25 filming days! That's insane. It's like

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GulfCoastAvengers/news/?a=35796&t=Chris_Evans_The_Difference_Between_Shooting_a_iCaptain_Americai_and_His_New_Film_iPuncturei